SIGNS OF THE TIMES

THE crisp, clear and invigorating weather of the past few days gives promise of an ideal Thanksgiving day, and the many bright evenings planned for the holiday will make the Thanksgiving season an unusually gay one. The annual football game to be played this year between Georgia Tech and Clemson is being anticipated with enthusiasm by young and old, and will be splendidly attended. The return of the college set, many of them accompanied by pretty visitors and all wearing varicolored chrysanthemums will make the gray old grandstand present again its yearly appearance of a bright winter flower garden. In the social world two events will mark Wednesday evening, the annual Thanksgiving dance to be held by the Nine o'Clock Garden club at the Piedmont club will be a beautiful occasion, while the biennial convocation of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity will come to a close with a ball at the Capital City club. In the large charitable institutions, Thanksgiving will be characterized by many beautiful and interesting features, and tables groaning under the weight of bountiful dinners will make the day one of good cheer for the inmates. These dinners will be the result of careful thought of matron and maid who have found time amid the rush of social engagements for many an informal gathering to plan with tender interest the details of real old-fashioned southern feasts for the less fortunate ones of the city. The annual Thanksgiving shower for the Home for Incapables will take place during the week, and in the free kindergartens the same beautiful program of last year will be carried out, that of bringing Thanksgiving to the little ones by making them carry blessings to old and helpless people, and early Thursday morning the little people, accompanied by their teachers, will be seen winding their way from house to house carrying baskets laden with rosy-cheeked apples and Thanksgiving dainties.

DIAMONDS

Buy Them Only Where You Have
Implicit Confidence in the Store

When you buy anything so valuable as a diamond, it is the better part of wisdom to first consider the reputation of the house with which you deal.

Most people buy diamonds on "faith," knowing little or nothing of them themselves; they can only accept the word of the salesman.

The name Eugene V. Haynes Co. is your guarantee. It stands for character and integrity in its business activities and the quality of its merchandise is unquestionable.

You will not only have the advantage of our expert knowledge on precious stones, but you can also buy a diamond here at the lowest possible price and on the following attractive terms:

One-fifth cash and the balance in ten equal monthly payments.

Wedding of Miss
Divine and Mr.
Grady

A TYPICAL southern wedding was that of Miss Rebekah Divine and Mr. Henry Grady, Jr., of Chattanooga, which was solemnized Wednesday at the beautiful old home of the bride at Carters. Cherry log fires blazing in the great wide fireplace made a pleasing contrast to the crisp November weather without. Cedar from the plantation festooned doorways and arches and autumn leaves in the brilliant fall colors of crimson and gold adorned the walls.

The marriage was solemnized at eight noon in the drawing room. Mr. Samuel Carter gave his niece in marriage, who was beautiful in her going-away gown of hunter's green velvet combined with cloth of gold and rare lace. Miss Rebekah Divine was the maid of honor and wore a gown of cream colored charmeuse and net fashioned with girlish simplicity. Mr. Henry Veach, of Chattanooga, was best man and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Clark of Chattanooga.

Many unusual and beautiful features marked the wedding. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party passed out into the park and walked through the bright winter sunshine to the family burial place and laid the wedding flowers on the graves. The wedding breakfast, which followed was typical of the old southern days and looking through the windows, far down into the park could be seen tables for the old family servants spread with white and garlanded with cedar.

Mrs. Emily Carter Divine was assisted in the entertainment of her guests by Mrs. Grady, of Chattanooga, the mother of the bride. Among the guests were Mrs. Thaddeus Horton, Judge and Mrs. Spencer R. Atkinson.

Conspicuous Nose Pores

How to reduce them

Complexions otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores. In such cases the small muscular fibers of the nose have become weakened and do not keep the pores closed as they should be. Instead these pores collect dirt, clog up, and become enlarged.

Begin tonight to use this treatment

Wring a cloth from very hot water, lay it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for a few minutes with a lump of ice.

Woodbury's Facial Soap cleanses the pores. This treatment with it strengthens the muscular fibers of the nose pores so that they can contract properly. But do not expect to change in a week a condition resulting from years of neglect. Use this treatment persistently. It will gradually reduce the enlarged pores and cause them to contract until they are inconspicuous.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of a skin specialist. It costs 25c a cake. No one hesitates at the price after their first cake.

Do this today—Now! Tear out the illustration of the cake below and put it in your purse as a reminder to get Woodbury's. Tear out the cake now. Take it to your druggist or toilet counter today. Begin tonight to get the benefit of this facial soap. For sale by dealers everywhere.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

SAVES THE HAIR AND IMPROVES ONES APPEARANCE

It is as a preventive that Newbro's Herpicide makes its strongest appeal. This valuable scalp prophylactic strikes at the very root of hair trouble by eradicating the contagion that causes dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. A complete plan of scalp cleanliness cannot well be carried out without the use of Herpicide, which prevents reinfection and keeps the scalp in a sanitary condition.

Herpicide gives assurance of its value from the very first application. It contains no oil or grease and by making the hair light and fluffy, Herpicide helps increase one's personal charm and attractiveness.

"Atlanta-Made"

Furniture Sale

To Encourage Atlanta Industries

The J. M. High Company

Will, This Week, Conduct a Mammoth Exhibition and Sale of "Atlanta-Made" Furniture

The J. M. High Company's campaign for "Atlanta-made" pure foods, last week, did much to win for "Atlanta-made" products the prestige and the respect to which they are entitled. High's "Made-in-Atlanta" Pure Food Week met with quick response, a response that was enthusiastic, from thousands of Atlanta housewives, and there is many an Atlanta home that has, as a result of last week's exhibition at our store, adopted "Made-in-Atlanta" as its slogan.

The J. M. High Company will continue the "Atlanta-made" campaign indefinitely. Through this systematic boosting of "Atlanta-made" goods we are not only making new friends and new customers for our store, creating a greater demand for goods that are made in Atlanta, and consequently helping furnish employment for the men and women of Atlanta, but we are selling goods of a superior quality, and as a result are, at one and the same time, placing both this store and the industrial life of Atlanta on a firmer and safer business foundation.

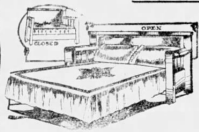

During the Coming Week We Will Feature

"Atlanta-Made" Furniture

—furniture made right here in our own city limits, in Atlanta furniture factories that give employment to more than eight hundred men (not including the factories' officers), and whose weekly payroll is in excess of $9,000.00. These eight hundred Atlanta employees place right back into circulation every week the $9,000.00 paid them for their work. They live here, buy clothes, food, coal, pay rent, and expend their earnings for the things which Atlanta merchants have for sale. They will buy their Christmas gifts here in Atlanta. Why not buy yours at this sale of furniture made in Atlanta by these men? There's no more appropriate gift for Christmas than a handsome piece of "Atlanta-made" furniture.

Each factory can add additional men, and each factory can increase its payroll, if the people of Atlanta will patronize these Atlanta industries—if the Atlanta people, all the Atlanta people, will but buy "Atlanta-made" furniture.

Visit the exhibition and sale of "Atlanta-made" furniture at the J. M. High Company's store this week, and see for yourself that what we have to say about it is true. There is no better furniture made anywhere in the world than is made right here in Atlanta—and there is no more handsomely designed and finished furniture than the Atlanta factories turn out. We will divide the payments to suit all purchasers of "Atlanta-made" furniture at the sale this week, and we will hold for delivery December 23, any piece of furniture you may want to give as a Christmas present.

Education day will be celebrated at the Atlanta Women's club Monday with an attractive program arranged by a committee under the leadership of Mrs. Spencer Atkinson.

The Flowers of Israel

Club Elects Officers

The regular monthly meeting of the "Flowers of Israel" club was held last Sunday at the Sunday school rooms of the Congregation Ahavath Achim.

The following officers were elected: Miss Bertha Ellison, honorary president; Miss Rosa Rosenman, president; Miss Sarah Shuman, vice president; Miss Rosa (gold), recording secretary; Miss Esther Barnett, financial secretary; Miss Ida Siegel, treasurer; and Miss Rae Rosenberg, librarian.

It was decided to have a Thanksgiving day entertainment Thursday, November 26, in the Sunday school rooms. Mr. M. Sheinbaum, the superintendent of the Sunday school, will have charge of the program.

The arrangement committee is composed of Miss Rae Jaffe, chairman; Miss Sarah Cohen; Miss Annie Rosenman; Miss Bertha Ellison and Dr. Solo. H. Goldstein.

Party for Recent Bride

Mrs. F. E. Kibler entertained informally at her home in Lake View Thursday afternoon in honor of her sister, Mrs. Frederick Anderson Rice.

The reception rooms were bright with cut flowers and growing plants. Miss Nannie Sue and Miss Beesie Smith served punch.

During the afternoon an interesting contest was held in which Mrs. George Johnston won first prize, a crocheted centerpiece, and Mrs. H. H. Harris won the second prize, a hand embroidered guest towel.

The guest prize was a linen scarf. Mrs. Leachridge, Mrs. Weatherly, Mrs. J. C. Harrison and Miss Annie Reeves assisted in entertaining. The guests were Mrs. J. A. Massey, Mrs. C. F. Holt, Mrs. Logan Moss, Mrs. J. C. Harrison, Mrs. M. M. Anderson, Mrs. LeRoy Holcombe, Mrs. J. W. Stallings, Mrs. W. H. Freeman, Mrs. W. A. Wrightwell, Mrs. E. V. Garstang, Mrs. Peyton Turner, Mrs. H. Shower to Bride Elect

Miss Sarah Davison a bride elect, of Woodville, has been the honor guest at many parties.

A miscellaneous shower was given recently by Mrs. J. Lamar Wilson. The drawing room was artistically decorated with roses and autumn leaves.

Miss Armstrong and Miss McWhorter served chocolate. The shower was in the form of a "Wishing Well," which was ingeniously constructed in one corner of the dining room. Miss Annie Davison, a sister, drew up the articles, which were placed in the bucket by Master James Wilson, who represented the frog down in the well, and were received by the bride elect.

The dining room was decorated with green and pink hearts, and the table which held the bride's cake was artistically decorated with a cupid hanging over it.

Miss Armstrong cut the dime and Miss Jackson cut the ring. The bouquet was caught by Miss McWhorter. Mrs. Wilson was crowned in green silk, and the bride elect wore black satin drew up the articles, which were placed

SOCIETY BELLES CANDIDATES FOR QUEEN OF CARNIVAL

PLANS FOR THE CARNIVAL

THE presence in the city of Mrs. Daisy McLaurin Stevens, president general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, was the reason for many of the large social functions of the week. Mrs. Stevens accompanied by her pages, Mrs. Scates and Miss Stubbs, spent several days in the city en route from Savannah, where her selection to the presidency of the United Daughters of the Confederacy was the crowning event of the general convention. Thursday morning Mrs. Stevens was the honor guest at a luncheon given by the members of the executive board of the Uncle Remus memorial association at the Wynton hotel. The occasion was one of delightful hospitality. Mrs. Charles Q. C. Leigh, president of the Chicago chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, who visited Mrs. A. McD. Rives during the week, was an honor guest at the luncheon. The members of the executive board, assisted by Mrs. Joel Chandler Harris and Mrs. R. Taylor Canale, the hostess of the Uncle Remus home, extended a most cordial greeting to the guests, who included, besides the officers, only a limited number from out of town.

Thursday afternoon the Atlanta chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, entertained at a brilliant reception at the Capital City club. Mrs. T. T. Sparks, acting president, and Mrs. Stevens, the guest of honor, assisted by the state officers, received the guests in the ball room, which was decorated throughout with red and white, the colors of the society. During the afternoon Mrs. Stevens made a short address, the subject being the aims of the organization of which she is the president. At the close of her interesting speech an orchestra played many of the southern melodies. The guests included, besides the members of the local chapter, a large number from out of town.

Mrs. WILLIAM RUSSELL HOYT, whose marriage was an interesting event of the early summer, was the guest of honor at the afternoon tea at which Mrs. J. Edgar Hunnicutt entertained Tuesday at her home on Peachtree road. A wealth of yellow and white drapery decorated the room where the guests were received and palms and handsome ferns formed an effective background for the receiving party. Mrs. E. P. McBurney and Miss Florence Crosby served tea at the beautifully appointed tea table and Miss Maria Hoyt Brown and Miss Margaret Hoyt served punch in the library from a crystal bowl garlanded with autumn leaves and embedded in fruit. Assisting in the entertainment of the guests were Mrs. George Brown, Mrs. William A. Hoyt, Mrs. William A. Wimbish, Mrs. E. Foster, Mrs. Mollie Wilkinson and Mrs. William R. Prescott.

A NUMBER of charming visitors have added to the pleasure of the bright social events of the past week. Among the debutantes set Miss Jean MacGregor, of Springfield, Mo., the guest of Miss Josephine Campbell, has been entertained at a series of parties. Monday afternoon, Miss Campbell, entertained at a box party at the Forsyth theater in honor of Miss MacGregor. Tuesday afternoon, Miss Josephine Mobley gave a beautiful luncheon at her home on Juniper street, and Tuesday evening, the popular visitor was the central figure at a small dancing party given by Mr. Wimbish Peters, at the Piedmont club. Wednesday afternoon, Miss Margaret Taylor entertained Miss MacGregor and Miss Campbell, at the tea table at the Piedmont club. The party luncheon at which Miss Helen McCreary entertained Friday, was for Miss MacGregor, and Miss Mary Orme, of New Orleans, La.

The Misses Hammond entertained delightfully at tea Saturday afternoon, at their apartment on Juniper street, in honor of their niece, Miss Laura Bailey of Griffin, who is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. James H. Gilbert.

An artistic arrangement of pale pink and shaggy pink chrysanthemums formed the centerpiece of the prettily appointed tea table and the white bulbs in the dining room were shaded in pink. Presiding over the table and assisting in entertaining were Mrs. James H. Gilbert, Miss Harris, Miss Esther Smith and Miss Isabella Tyson, of Louisville, Ky.

Miss Margaret Taylor and Mrs. Mary Colquhoun, of Rock Hill, S. C., who are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Mack, were complimented with a series of informal parties during the past week. Mrs. Roy Collier, gave a beautiful luncheon Thursday in their honor, and Mrs. Park Woodward entertained at luncheon Friday. The attractive visitors shared honors with Mrs. W. O. Foster, a recent bride, at the pleasant party at which Mrs. Tyre Jennings entertained Saturday. Miss Isabella Tyson, of Knoxville, Tenn., was entertained at a beautiful dinner dance Thursday evening, by her hostess, Miss Esther Smith, and was the central figure in a party entertained by Mr. Stanley Mathewson at the dinner

From a social standpoint, the box and hominy carnival under the auspices of the Atlanta Ad Men's club on the afternoon and evening of December 2, promises to be an unusually interesting event. It will at least decide one important question—who is the most popular of Atlanta's debutantes.

There is now under way, in connection with the carnival, a contest for the selection of the most popular debutante as queen of the carnival reception and ball to be held in the evening. Twelve of Atlanta's prettiest girls have been entered in the race and there is keen, though friendly, rivalry for the queenly honors. Of course, only one of the young women will win out in the final analysis, but the other eleven will be honored, too, for they will make up the list of maids of honor to Her Majesty. Each of the eleven maids of honor will have the privilege of selecting one other maid from among her girl friends and they will also have an opportunity—and here's an interesting announcement—of selecting, one each, a "gentleman-in-waiting." The interest here is to find out just who, among Atlanta's young men, will be the selected "favorite" of each of the court members.

Mrs. W. L. Post will act as chaperone at the carnival ball and a list of patronesses will be selected, its number to include the mothers of the young women contesting and others prominent in the social life.

The queenly court, in addition to having full sway at the ball, will take conspicuous part in the spectacular pageant which will be the afternoon feature of the carnival. They will ride in decorated automobiles at the head of the procession and will officially review the line of march from the balcony of the Capital City club. They will also select the prize winners in the contest for the best decorated floats and automobiles and will officially award the prizes on behalf of the Ad Men's club. Now as to the identity of the young debutantes. The following have been nominated:

Miss Hattie Boyles, Miss Wyckliffe Wurn, Miss Mary Murphy, Miss Allen Fielder, Miss Adrienne Battey, Miss Mary Rice, Miss Lawson Hines, Miss Louise Parker, Miss Mary King, Miss Mamie Kirkpatrick and Miss Mal Horne.

The voting is now under way at Coney's Whitehall street drug store, where the ballot box has been installed. Purchase of an invitation to the ball procures a blank ballot and a gold button symbolic of the carnival spirit.

charmingly entertained as the guest of Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb. Among the lovely group of visiting matrons who have been delightfully entertained during the week were Mrs. L. R. Wizard At Developing Young Players

Baltimore Manager Has Great Record in Sending Stars to Big Leagues, and Rarely Fails to Get Fancy Prices for His Proteges

BALTIMORE, Nov. 21.—While he has not realized as much money through his sales of players this season as he would have had it not been for the war between the Federal league and organized baseball, Jack Dunn has stirred the country with his transactions, for people who follow the great American pastime have come to regard the Baltimore owner as a wizard in the development of good material while it is in the rough.

Indeed, Connie Mack is perhaps the only man in baseball who has picked up so many young players for so little money and turned them into stars. Dunn, in most instances, has not even given his proteges a dollar, and he has brought him big money. It has made a mistake or two, but every one looks something out of it, and the all-up is the exception, not the rule, when J. Dunn turns upon a player's ability.

In New York the experts are telling that Dunn is the best manager in the league ball club, but that he is a great financier just the same. When one considers that Dunn has found on Baltimore's back lots alone cannot be counted that he knows a player when he sees him.

MAILED BROUGHT BIGGEST PRICE.—The greatest amount of money ever received for a man was $18,000, which was paid for the services of Fritz Mailed. Lefty Russell brought $12,000 and George Ruth put at least $10,000 in Dunn's hands. These three are only the men he picked up here and sold for big sums. He sold Ben Adams to the Boston Braves for $10,000, and the first transaction netting him $10,000 from Dunn was the sale of Egan was sold to Dunn by Mack, but was developed by Dunn, for he was a very rare piece of timber when he was sold to Dunn. Eddie Murphy was placed in the hands of the Baltimore small sum of $600, was sold for a nice chunk to Mack after John McDermott's death, had passed him on.

Jimmy Walsh came here from the Athletics with a plan to boost him as a player of caliber yet he, too, was sold to Mack. Bob Shawkey, now also a member of the White Sox, was drafted from Harbinger by Dunn, but was turned over to Mack as part payment for Egan when Ben returned here last year.

When, after attracting Dunn's attention in a college game at Fayetteville in the spring of 1913, was drafted by the North Carolina team, he was sold and disposed of to Boston at a very small sum, and after a few years he was sold to the Orioles.

Butcher Schmidt was discovered as a pitcher by Dunn, and was sold to the Yankees and later to the Athletics. The manager who made a man of him, and now the Baltimorean is holding down the initial corner for the Braves.

Dunn also grabbed George Mabel, and Fred Dye, who were sold to the Cardinals and year out that the St. Louis Browns drafted him.

In his operations, with the making over of two or three castoffs, like Dyer, Morgan, Daniel and Edick, and Dunn's work in this city, but he also did some in Providence before he came here.

HE FOUND IRA THOMAS.—When managing the Clanton team Dunn found Ira Thomas, now captain of the Athletics. He first sold him to the New York Americans, but later the catcher drifted to Detroit, but did not make good. Ira probably would have been a star had he remained with Dunn. Dunn convinced Connie Mack that he was a wonderful player, and he took a chance on Dunn's judgment and was sold to the Athletics for $10,000.

Dunn lost money on the sale of Tommy White, the great Princeton star, who was sold to the Athletics for $10,000. In much the same manner Dunn put Wally Schang on the Athletics, who was sold with Buffalo, and nearly all the clubs of the American and National leagues had put in a draft.

It can be seen that Dunn has contributed much toward the making of the game history that the country knows today and that he has not forgotten the old players.

Gophers Land Second Honor.—CHATTANOOGA, Nov. 21.—Minnesota today won second place in the western conference race for football honors, defeating Chicago 13 to 7. Chicago, which had been in the lead, was defeated by the absence of Gray, its best player on even terms, one touchdown.

Until Captain Desjardins, of Chicago, was repeatedly sacked, Gray, a long punter, was hurt in the first play of the game. When he was taken out, Minnesota made its first touchdown by such a punter as the weakling.

Richmond College Finds William and Mary Easy.—RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 21.—William and Mary was outclassed by Richmond today, here today, the latter winning 23 to 0. Constant fumbling by William and Mary contributed to its defeat. Richmond gained six yards in five successful forward passes, failing to lose two passes to its credit. Richmond had the loss of 106 yards in penalties.

Baylor Wins Easily.—(Special Telegram to The Journal.) CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 21.—The Baylor school here defeated the city of Chattanooga 34 to 0. Baylor outclassed her opponent throughout.

Star Prep eams Play Tie, 12-12

With Championship at Stake, Neither Could Get Edge. Game Was Clean and Hard Fought

With the prep championship of Georgia at stake, the strong Riverdale and Gordon elevens battled to a tie at Grant field Saturday morning. The dual contest, standing 12 to 12, Gordon showed more power than did the Oakesville outfit, but the balance which they carried was not sufficient to gain for them a victory.

The game was hard fought throughout, and was remarkably free from rough work by either team. In the first half, Riverdale rushed the ball to Gordon's fifteen-yard line, where the line held for downs. Gordon then punted out of danger and neither team threatened to score during the remainder of the quarter.

On the first play in the second quarter, Preston kicked Riverdale right into the line, and the line on the ten-yard line. Beasley got six yards through the line on the second play, and then Preston played back tackle for the remaining three plays. No goal was kicked. A bit later in the same quarter, Riverdale recovered the ball on the twenty-yard line, and then Preston played back tackle for the remaining three plays. No goal was kicked.

Neither team went any material distance in the third quarter. In the fourth, Gordon took the ball near the center of the field and rushed it by the four, Gordon took the ball near the center of the field and rushed it by the four, Gordon took the ball near the center of the field and rushed it by the four.

European War Takes Big Part Among Athletes

Field and Track Stars Numerous Among Soldiers Who Have Fallen Battling for Warring Nations—Jean Bouin and Rau Among Number. Ledoux, French Bantam, a Victim

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—It is not yet four months since the war began, yet the list of those who gave up their lives on the battlefields of Europe is astounding. The war monster is grim and merciless and spares no one, but seems from all classes, creeds, and kinds of people with a heavy hand, yet the sports of the world feel that the toll of athletes is unduly large. Each day, almost, the cables bear news of some great fellow who will compete more, and a pall of deep and genuine sadness rests over the sport loving of this country.

Jean Bouin, one of the greatest and most interesting athletes of the world, died. As an athlete Bouin was superlative—speed, strength, and grit of the pugilist type. He carried from his home a record of 100 yards in 11 seconds, and a mile in 16 minutes, and a half mile in 10 minutes, and a half mile in 10 minutes, and a half mile in 10 minutes.

Peace Will Mean "Kangaroos" Much for Pels

President Heinemann Expects to Land Several New Men From Naps as Soon as Baseball War Ceases

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21.—Peace among the two teams in the Southern league will be a position of double advantage to the Pelicans club. According to Heinemann, it is certain the rival factions will get together shortly, and once the peace agreement is signed, not only the Pels, but every other minor league will be in a position to get the surplus material to be turned loose by the major league managers.

The first consignment of the Pelicans will naturally come from New Orleans. Although Heinemann is not ready to give out the names of the players he hopes to land, at least seven or eight are to be shipped here. Nearly all of the rest will be pitchers, one or two of them college men plucked by Nap scouts.

No change will be made in the outfield to any extent, says Heinemann. Burns, Sylvester, Hendryx, and Ed. Williams are to be entrusted with the outer positions, while Coyne, Flick and Knapp are slated for first, second and third base. Delaney is the backstop, with Weaver, Kinsinger and possibly Haggy members of the pitching staff.

Heinemann is keen to get a left-hander to pitch, and this is not going to be an easy task, as the only left-hander in the league is in the outfield now. Coast Promoter May Enter Fight Game in N. O.

Tom McCreary, Well Known in Pugilistic Circles, Wanted by Crescent City Business Men to Manage New Fight Club in That City

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 21.—Convinced D. J. Torricelli, manager of the West-side and Orleans Athletic club, is opposed to the movement to bring pugilistic promoter, Tom McCreary, to manage the proposed arena in the city. McCreary is a well known pugilistic promoter, and is well known in the city.

Where the new club is going to be located is one of the details. Torricelli and Willard are not quite ready to discuss the arena, according to Torricelli, will not be erected on the site of the arena. Speculation is that all of the details of the McCreary fight club will be settled in the near future. Interested, nothing will be given to the pugilistic promoter, and McCreary has been here for some time. Whether Torricelli will enter the fight game, or whether he will be definitely settled within the next two or three weeks, is not known.

Y.M.C.A. Plans Athletic Meet

The Young Men's Christian Association will conduct their first athletic and aquatic meet on Thanksgiving day at Madison Square Garden, New York.

This will be a preliminary affair for a series of meets beginning January 1, which will be conducted on a classified basis. Through this classification the Y.M.C.A. will be able to get the best of their own ability. This done away with the old handicap idea, where so much blame was laid upon the men who did the handicapping. A man will be classified according to his previous performance, that will be in the 100 yards dash between 12-15 and 12-15, which will be placed in Class A. If he runs it between 13-15 and 12-15, he is in Class B, and so on.

There has been arranged a schedule for each event. In this first meet there will be no classification. It is expected that many men will enter the association, and all will compete, their records all being kept and the best records will establish the association records. These records will be placed upon the association board in the gymnasium and the swimming pool. Another track will be held in December.

WRIGLEY CO. TAKES TEN-CENT COTTON IN PAYMENT OF DEBTS

Big Chewing Gum Firm Notifies Southern Jobbers It Will Accept Cotton Up to Value of One Million Dollars

COVERS ALL PURCHASES
THROUGH DECEMBER 31

Only Stipulations Are That Staple Must Come From Needy Retailer and Farmer Who Must Sell

The William Wrigley, Jr. company, of Chicago, makers of Spearmint chewing gum have notified their jobbers in the south that they will take cotton at 10 cents a pound up to one million dollars in payment of present indebtedness and future business. This is one of the latest moves the "buy-a-bale" movement has received in some time and it shows the ever active enterprise of this widely known manufacturing company. A copy of the letter was furnished the Firing Line by the Brower Candy company, who are large distributors of the Wrigley products, and the following is a paragraph from the letter which was sent to the jobbers in the south:

"We will take middling cotton at 10 cents per pound not only for the amount of your present indebtedness to us but also to cover any purchases you may make from us to December 31, 1914. Our stipulations are that the cotton for which you charge us 10 cents a pound and warehouse for our account, must be taken from a needy retailer, which in turn is taken from a needy farmer, and that when your order has reached the sum of one million dollars, we are at liberty to discontinue the arrangement if we think it necessary for us to do so."

"You of course understand that our only possible object in buying an article at 10 cents a pound higher than the market is to help our good friends in the south at this time."

SOUTH IS BUSY GETTING READY FOR SANTA CLAUS

Seven New Firms Added to "Samaritan's" List During Week

E. P. Lewis of McClure's, is authority for the statement that Santa is busy in America, Thursday, November 25, and that he will spend Thanksgiving, the 28th, in the south. This day will find millions crowded around the brightly fire-lit streets to see this opportunity to determine what he will give John and Mary who have outgrown their doll and the drum of last year.

He has been notified by the good Samaritan Lewis that if he will only visit the patrons of his company he will find lots for John and Mary, as well as many pretty and useful presents for father and mother.

"We all know that Santa and his wonderful helpers make their delightful mysterious visit on the night of December 24 and must have all his packs well filled long before the time. Merchants the world-over are busy buying pretty things to bring a smile to someone's face. Orders must be placed early, while buying's good." A belated Christmas is like an orange without a lime. Let us be ready in time," said Mr. Lewis.

Would you like to observe Monday as your Sunday, one day after every one else? No! Neither would you like your Christmas one week or even one day late. Add your name to the "Samaritan's" list.

Following are some of the names added since last Sunday:

Pittsford, Tenn-Cent Co., Pittsford, Ga.
Taylor & Ford, Villa Rica, Ga.
Jordan & Crouch, Linnet, Ala.
Tosco, Tenn-Cent Co., Toccoa, Ga.
Tallapoosa, Tenn-Cent Co., Tallapoosa, Ga.

TRAVELING MEN SEEK PASSAGE OF HOTEL BILL

Members of the Travelers' Protective association will meet with the Hotel Men's convention in Columbus, Ga., December 4. Steps will be taken at this time to secure the passage of the hotel bill which was introduced in the legislative session.

The bill provides for defining what is and what is not a hotel, also defines what is a boarding house, a restaurant and an apartment house. It provides a state hotel commissioner whose duties will be the enforcement of the sanitary regulations provided by the bill.

BIG SUCCESS ASSURED FOR SHOW TO BE GIVEN BY TRAVELING MEN DEC. 5

Enthusiasm Grows as Date for Show Draws Near—Advance Sale of Tickets Going Forward at Lively Clip

Enthusiasm over the traveling men's show to be given at the Atlanta theater, December 5, continues to increase. The advance sale of tickets indicates that the show will be an immense success, and that probably an extra performance will be necessitated. W. O. Moore, chairman of the publicity committee, in speaking of the show, said:

"The nearer the time approaches for putting on the big show known as 'A Day in a Union Station,' the more enthusiastic everybody becomes. Unquestionably there was never before in the history of Atlanta a time when such character in the show was more greatly interested and devoted so much time to each member of the cast is giving to 'Union Station' rehearsals."

"The people of Atlanta will have the greatest treat of their lives in attending this performance. As rehearsals have been going on almost daily for the last four weeks, every character is thoroughly familiar with his role and every part will be performed in the most entertaining style."

"Mrs. Charles A. Shelton who has been chief director of many plays, now confidently expects that this show will be the best of all. The traveling men of the U. C. T. are determined that this shall be the most realistic and gingerly amateur show ever given in Atlanta."

A. P. MORGAN GRAIN CO. FINISHES WAREHOUSE

Has Facilities Now for Caring for Ten Cars of Grain at One Switching

The A. P. Morgan Grain company has completed its new warehouse at 383 Murphy avenue, on the Atlanta and West Point Belt line. This warehouse has facilities for handling ten cars of grain at one switching and is one of the country's most modern buildings. This is the oldest grain company in Atlanta and is headed by a man of remarkable business experience. In 1871 Mr. A. P. Morgan was a Coweta county grocery clerk at a salary of $30 a month. He was soon advanced to $40 a month and on this salary supported his wife and one child.

After several years on a salary he was admitted into the firm of Prasier & Morgan in 1886. This firm was dissolved by mutual consent in 1886. A. P. Morgan succeeded. After two years this firm was succeeded by Morgan & Mathews and later by the A. P. Morgan Grain company.

Mr. Morgan has been at the head of this firm since the company's organization and has built it to one of the biggest concerns in the country.

Arthur Whitmeyer, South Carolina representative of Ragan-Malone company, spent the latter part of the week in the Atlanta office, bringing in a customer to whom he sold a nice bill of goods.

Montag Bros. Get More Dolls From German Factory

Montag Bros. have succeeded in getting through a shipment of fourteen cases of dolls from Germany by way of Rotterdam and the North sea. This is in addition to the seven carloads of dolls and the four carloads of toys which this firm fortunately had on the way when war was declared by Germany. J. C. Mathews, of this firm, points out that this is probably the last shipment which will be received from Germany for some time.

"Notwithstanding this," said Mr. Mathews, "our prices are going to be no higher than ordinary. Our orders were placed some time in advance and since we secured this shipment without any additional expense except that of storage, we are not going to raise our price."

Visitor Praises This City After Long Trip Over South

Atlanta is the liveliest city in the south, according to J. N. Alexious, southern representative of Stachelsberg company, who is here for several weeks, visiting the city with the sales force of the Capital City Tobacco company.

Mr. Alexious has just finished a six months' tour of all the principal southern cities, in each of which he has investigated business conditions carefully. He declares that business conditions in Atlanta are better than in any other city he has yet seen, and ranks this city as the south's leading metropolis.

Plant Potatoes and Plenty of Them, He Urges, and There Won't Be Any Calamity Howls in the South

DEMAND IS SURE AND

Produce Man Points Out Benefits to Be Derived by Steer-ing Clear of the One-Crop Plan and Planting Foodstuffs

Editor Firing Line:

The need of raising more food products and less cotton has been brought more poignantly home to the writer than ever before during the past few weeks. We have been trying hard and low to buy carload lots of sweet potatoes and have entirely failed.

This crop is easily grown on almost any southern farm and the yield is from 80 to 200 bushels to the acre, which, at 40 cents a bushel, means from $32 to $80 per acre net to the farmer. Which, anyone can see at a glance, is more than double the amount which could possibly be realized from cotton, and there is always a demand in the market for good sweet potatoes, and the money waiting to pay for them. In our opinion no farmer could do better than to plant five or ten acres at least and as much more as possible in sweet potatoes of the Nancy Hall or Porto Rican variety, for each plow operated.

If the farmers would raise, first of all, plenty of everything they need at home, and then lots of sweet potatoes instead of running around in times like the present and crying hard times, they could be riding in fine automobiles, particularly, as the earth's garden spots. Here's for more, better and bigger sweet potatoes along with a bigger and better south.

C. ERNEST ALLEN TELLS OF NOVELTIES ADDED TO FIREWORKS THIS YEAR

C. ERNEST ALLEN.

Mr. Allen is conducting the Georgia Fireworks company, at 126 Madison avenue.

It's a bit scary to the average layman to stand in the middle of almost enough powder to blow the European war to "smithereens" if properly applied. At least, that's the way it felt to the Firing Line representative in the Georgia Fireworks company warehouse at 126 Madison avenue, when he realized that one match could make him see more snakes and stars than a dozen gallons of wildcat whisky.

But to C. Ernest Allen, head of the company, there doesn't seem to be the remotest possibility of anything "break-ing."

Perhaps it is because Mr. Allen has had something like twenty-one years of experience in the fireworks business that he isn't nervous. Anyway, Mr. Allen's twenty-one years of experience have made him competent to prophesy and he is authority for the statement that there'll be some Christmas this year. The sales of his Christmas no-dees are coming in just as rapidly this year as ever before, if not more so, he says. He is particularly enthusiastic over the results of the advertisement published in last Sunday's Firing Line.

"The Georgia Fireworks company represents the greatest distributors of fireworks in the world," said Mr. Allen. "We carry absolutely no old stock. We have just received the largest single shipment of fireworks ever brought to the south, the car containing 11,000 cases, aggregating 43,000 pounds in weight. Other big shipments are expected."

BETTER EVERY DAY

That's the report from our Mail Order Desks.

Folks are going to buy shoes, and wise folks want good ones.

This is not the season to waste money on so-called cheap shoes, nor to take chances on an unknown quality.

Red Seal shoes have behind them a record of thirty years.

Scores of our well-known brands have long service records of six to sixteen months.

Besides the economy to your customers, there must be the satisfaction of keeping home folks employed and Southern money in the South.

We want the business of prompt-paying merchants, to whom we offer a large stock of reasonable shoes at prices that will look cheap in January.

BARKEEPERS' FRIEND SAMPLES DISTRIBUTED

Orders for Polish are Coming in Rapidly, Says Frank Revson

Frank Revson, of the local bar supply house, states that requests for samples of "Barkeeper's Friend" are coming in rapidly and that sales of this polish are piling up at a lively clip. Barkeeper's Friend is manufactured by the George William Hoffman company and has had a long and successful sale. It has received the highest awards at the world's fairs in both Chicago and St. Louis. Speaking of this polish, Mr. Revson said:

"Barkeeper's Friend is an absolute hygienic necessity not only to the business world, but also to the home. It is a household cleanser, being unequalled for polishing the finest brass, nickel and copper ornaments and fixtures; for scouring enamel and porcelain ware, bath tubs, sinks, tile and marble; and for shining windows and mirrors. Moreover, it cannot explode and there is safer to use than the liquid gasoline metal polishes. Barkeeper's Friend is economical because it is best, and because a little goes a long way. Also, it never deteriorates in that it never loses its strength, no matter how old it may be."

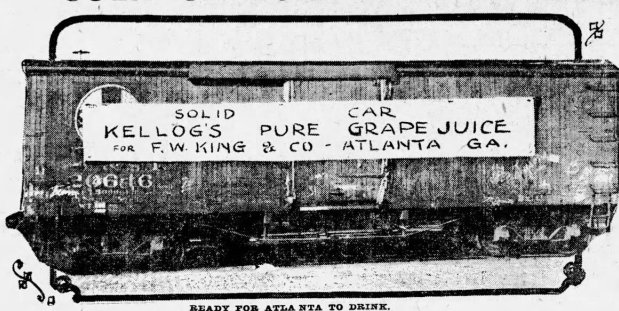

"The Geo. William Hoffman Co. is the only metal polish concern in the world that runs its own mills and controls its own mines. It is also the only metal polish concern that sends its polishes to foreign countries. These two facts together make it also reasons why Barkeeper's Friend has had such universal success."

"Barkeeper's Friend has for years been used by such leading railroad companies as the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Louisville and Nashville, and the C. B. and Q., and by the leading hotels and restaurants everywhere. The fact that practically all the state institutions in the United States use this polish exclusively is also a proof of its extensive use and its unsurpassed merit."

Big Shipments of Kellogg's Pure Grape Juice and Low- ney's Chocolates Have Reached Atlanta

F. W. King & Co. has just received a solid carload of Kellogg's pure grape juice, which is to be distributed among the Atlanta retailers. This consignment consists of various sizes of bottles, has reached the city and is now ready for delivery.

Kellogg's pure grape juice is universally known as the best grape juice bottled, said T. B. Everett, of F. W. King & Co. "We are expecting a tremendous sale on this—in fact the sale has already started."

In addition to the big shipment of grape juice, F. W. King & Co. have just received a large quantity of Lowney's Christmas candies. According to Mr. Everett, orders for the holiday trade are coming in rapidly.

"Lowney's" said Mr. Everett, "are classed among the highest grades of chocolate bonbons. They come in fancy boxes and retail as high as $1 a pound."

pected soon to meet the demands of the jobbers of Georgia and the south generally."

To meet the demands of Georgia merchants and wholesale houses, Mr. Allen has increased his sales force during the past week.

"The advertisement we carried in the Firing Line last Sunday is bringing in splendid results," said Mr. Allen, "and orders are coming in rapidly. As heretofore, we are featuring Gold Dragon salutes and the National repeating pistol, along with, of course, the usual line of fireworks with which the public is acquainted."

ATLANTA'S CREDIT MEN HEAR OF RESERVE BANK

Addresses Delivered by Governor J. A. McCord and Director T. H. Saunders

With E. L. Adams, as president presiding, the third quarterly meeting of the Atlanta Credit Men's association was held in the chamber of commerce Tuesday night. T. H. Saunders, of New Orleans, one of the Atlanta district reserve bank directors, explained the operations of the federal reserve system, as did Joseph A. McCord, governor of the Atlanta Regional bank.

The speakers were optimistic over the possibilities of the new bank, predicting that business in the country will

BE THANKFUL

If you have only bread to eat With scarcely change to stir, Just thank your lucky stars it's sweet That you are not in a battle.

Be thankful, tho' you are not in style, Your raiment torn and tattered, Always look up and wear a smile, Because your head's not battered.

Be thankful if the clouds are dark, The sun may shine tomorrow, Just think of those without a spark, Their hearts are filled with sorrow.

Be thankful, do not bow the knee To pessimistic shrine, That's for the dog—his nature see! He has a right to whine.

A. P. MORGAN GRAIN COMPANY ONE OF THE LARGEST IN THE SOUTH

A.P. MORGAN GRAIN CO.

The above photograph shows the exterior of the new warehouse of A. P. Morgan Grain Company, one of the oldest and largest grain companies in the entire South. The warehouse shown in the above illustration is located at 380 Murphy Avenue, on the Atlanta & West Point Belt Line, is a new and thoroughly modern building in every respect, sanitary, and has perfect ventilation. It is three hundred feet from any other building, and is, in fact, an ideal grain warehouse.

The A. P. Morgan Grain Company is one of the oldest grain firms in the city of Atlanta. It was first organized in 1886, under the firm name of Morgan & Mathews. The business was conducted under this firm name for two years, when it was changed to the A. P. Morgan Grain Company. In those days the warehouse was located at 26-28 Alabama Street. In 1900 Mr. A. P. Morgan took his two sons, Almond and Frazier, into the business with him. The business grew and prospered until today it is one of the largest firms in the grain business in Atlanta—does as much business as any other Atlanta grain company, and enjoys the friendship and patronage of a large and appreciative clientele.

The company handles Flour, Grain, Hay, Cotton Mill Products, Seed Oats, Wheat, and Rye and Barley in season, and large quantities of the well-known milk-producing food for milch cows, Beet Pulp. A. P. Morgan is himself general manager of the company, and takes an active interest in every department. Almond Morgan is manager of the receiving and shipping department; S. C. Kicklighter has been with the firm for sixteen years and is head bookkeeper; F. M. Morgan is cashier and assistant bookkeeper, and has general supervision of the office department; G. F. Bomar, who has been with the firm for fifteen years, is the hay and grain inspector, and also performs the duties of shipping clerk; Miss Allie Morgan is private secretary to Mr. A. P. Morgan.

The warehouse has facilities for handling ten cars of grain at one switching. Our tracks are handled by the West Point Belt Line Co. as often as is necessary to handle the business. Immediately our cars are loaded they are transferred to connecting lines in the city, and under ordinary circumstances the orders reach their destination on the day following that on which they were filled at our warehouse. Quick dispatch is what our railroad connections furnish us and our customers.

Our warehouse is new and its capacity is one hundred solid cars.

We do a limited amount of storage business and can ordinarily accommodate a reasonable demand for storage. Our rates are low.

We manufacture the well-known brand, "White Middling"—a stock food and all kinds of molasses feed and other mill products.

Our leaders are HOLLY and RIVERSIDE SELF-RISING FLOURS.

Our standard patent brands are: Crystal, Silver Lake, Sweet Home, Perfection and Bakers' Choice.

Our syrup feed is composed of alfalfa, grain and cane molasses—for horses and mules.

We handle from a half to three-quarters of a million dollars' worth of grain per annum.

Wholesale only.

Russian Soldiers On the German Frontier

By Angus Perkerson

YOU'VE got to let them go. If the Germans win there'll be no more England."

The mother said it, her chair by the window that looks off toward the north—the north and Dundee in the hollow of the Scotch hills.

And so it is with them all. Forty British lads—and I take into that account the Irish and the Scotch—are off from Atlanta to the war. But not a mother or a sister has held them back.

God bless you, it's been, and may 'em return to us. But it's home that's swelling you now.

I don't pretend to have seen the dear ones of the forty. I talked with the mother and the sister of but one. Yet it was enough. Not a British lad who's set his face toward home, but has had the same good-bye though the words maybe were different.

W. F. Clarke, who captained them all, gives the estimate of forty, and "Mrs. George Beveridge, of Decatur, whose son was among them, says the number is no guess.

All Are Gone

It was not a month ago that twenty in one company took train at the Terminal station, with the song of Tippecanoe on their lips. And it was but a month before went the first score.

"All the lads are gone. They're gone from here, they're gone from Dundee. I hear from home there's not one left but a sickly bit of a fellow, and it's because they won't leave him. If there's any English or Irish or Scotch in you, home's the place now."

So, Mrs. Beveridge talked, her hands in her lap, her eyes on the window that looks first on the neat, newly made street in Decatur, but as you gaze, takes new strength and distance to itself, and lays before you a far-reaching view of the north.

It was, though the mother saw the hills of Dundee, and gathered strength from the sight, that everyone helps, there'll be no more England.

"If they reach England, and struck with the hand that fell on Belgium, nothing would remain to us."

We're sending them back to keep England among the nations."

Then, for a moment she stopped for a word of the knitting that went forward by the other window.

The Daughter's Work

The rain that fills the trenches, and the cold, have sent pleurisy to aid the bullets in France.

"Mufflers now are almost as good as new troops," said Kitchener.

So, Becky, the daughter of the house, was knitting.

She sat where the light fell softly and glinted on the long steel needles that flashed in and out weaving the wool thread into warm pieces for the troops—maybe for the lads from Dundee. She just looked up now and then to smile, and then worked on.

"She was awful mad the other night when someone meddled and tangled the thread," said the mother.

For a moment there was only the click of the steel needles.

"My son is George M. after his father," Mrs. Beveridge was explaining. "Long he's wanted to go, and we were not holding him, but it was bent we thought to wait a bit. When Kitchener needed him, why he was to go, because the good blood of the Scotch is in him.

A Lad Back Home

"But, till we heard from a nephew back home, our cooler words were prevailing. The lad there's but 16, though he told them he was 19, and being clever with electrical things they took him to go with the guns. He's to do the work that carries you to the thick of it. The boy's place is to be in the heart of the fighting, and him but 16.

"The word of all that came to us, and there was no stopping then. If him but 16 goes said our son, I who am 20 must go. And we couldn't say him 'nay.' And it looked, too, that he was needed.

"By all accounts it seemed then and it seems now that, at least, everyone helps, there'll be no more England.

And, so he went and now he's in Canada, drilling till his time comes.

"I think they send new men as the places are emptied. As the gaps are made, others come to fill. That seems to be the way."

There, she stopped for a moment, and sat with her shoulder bowed. The thought in her mind was that her boy is to be used so. He's to wait till he's properly drilled; and, then, a vacant place on the battle front is to be filled by him, and another man at home will wait till German shells have broken the front of the British line.

Picture of Himself

"It's awful," she said. "My word, it is." But her voice never quavered. "I know one family at home with five or six boys gone. We must give all we have. We wish it was over. We wish that all day. But it doesn't seem like ly to be soon. Such a tremendous lot of men. Such guns.

"But right now I don't think we're doing all we can. My idea is Kitchener's holding back his men till the Germans are a bit done. Then, we'll throw all we have against them. Still, it's to be a long fight. Of course, we'll win, we must."

Then she was back again, talking of her son.

"Like a lot of lads," she said smiling, "they went on to Montreal instead of stopping at a nearer place, as they should. Now, they're in camp drilling, and George's to send a picture of himself dressed up in his uniform.

"And," she broke off suddenly, "we had to have this war. When you've signed a treaty you must keep it, if there's any honor in the country. We'd our part to play, and we're playing it. "We all have have our part," said the mother. "The boy in Canada; the daughter," with a nod toward the girl who knitted. "Myself. We're to be brave here as they are there. And we try."

In the next breath she was choosing another topic as though to hide emotion that was breaking through her calm.

"It was a fine boat the Germans had in the Emden," she was saying. "It gave us no end of trouble, didn't it? The captain should have high honor. If they're all like that, they are the smart people, the Germans."

But it was too much to linger on the virtues of her enemies. She chose a peaceful subject.

"It's a grand, fine country you have here," she said. "You've no poor. When I said that first, someone laughed. But you don't know here what it is in London. Really, you all do well. It's next best to home."

She sat for a while smiling at the window, and then, her lips closed tightly.

"I have a son who's 16," she began slowly. "Jim. He's not like his brother. He talks very little. And he wants to go. But 16—it's too young."

She got up and took a step toward the door, then back. The daughter had laid down her knitting, her eyes on the mother.

"Everyone must help," repeated the mother. "And they need all the lads now. But that—that's too much."

HINTS FOR COLD WEATHER

Paper Socks Are 'Comfy'

Campfire Ice The Lips

WHEN Jack Frost comes whistling down the corner it is time to think of donning a winter armor to outwit him. Warm coats and stout shoes answer the purpose fairly well, but there are several precautions which, if observed, will cause him to give up a searching look. One of the most effective and simplest parts of the winter armor is a protecting lotion for the face. True, it is time-worn advice, this winter salve, but only because it is good as it had the opportunity to become time-worn. Those who have beautiful skins must keep them from becoming worse. An excellent winter mask is made by first applying a good cold cream to the skin and then wiping it gently off with a soft cloth or an old handkerchief, and then applying a good powder. Enough of the powder and cream should be left on the face to protect it, but not a sufficient amount to make you appear a four-dipped clown, as I have seen some of my very young friends do. Below is the formula for an excellent cold cream.

Kentucky Cold Cream

Rosewater..... 1 ounce
Almond oil..... 1 ounce
White wax..... 1 ounce
Add the water slowly, so that it will mix well.

The lips are too tempting for Jack Frost to resist if they are left unprotected, and so it is well to rub camphor ice upon them before going into the cold and chilling winds. While cold cream can be used for the purpose, the camphor ice is the better of the two. The formula which I am giving you will produce effective results.

Campfire Ice

Reddish mud or lamb tallow..... 1 ounce
A pinch of gum camphor as large as an English walnut.
Mix together, stir until they are thoroughly mixed and allow to cool.

The Jack Frost's Secret

A pair of cosmetic gloves should always be kept in the drawer of the dressing table during the winter months. These may be an old pair of kid gloves three or four sizes too large, or better still, a pair of cotton flannel gloves which you can either buy or make. To make them is quite a simple matter. Take a large pair of gloves, preferably a man's, and use them for a pattern to cut out gloves of cotton flannel. The cotton flannel gloves need not fit so beautifully, but they should be above all things "roomy." Two sides are cut for each glove. When sewing them together, either by machine or hand, it is well to turn the seams out instead of in. They will in this way be easier of use. They will in this way be easier of use. They will in this way be easier of use.

Use a Protecting Lotion

These gloves should come well up on the wrist, for wrists chafed as well as hands. The cotton flannel glove is better than the kid because it can be laundered, and is, therefore, infinitely more sanitary. A large pair of white cotton gloves can be used for the same purpose. If you have two pairs on hand, one pair can be sent to the laundry each week. In using the gloves, first spread the cosmetic paste upon the hands and then slip the gloves on for the night. An excellent paste is made as follows:

Cosmetic Glove Paste

Ground glycerine, the white of an egg, a teaspoonful of glycerine and 1 ounce of cold cream.

Cold Cream

Cold cream can be made snug by the insertion of paper poles into the winter shoes. Newspaper has a hundred and one uses, but none better than that of lining the winter shoe. Cut a sole a little smaller than the outside of the shoe and then place it in the shoe in the form of the insole. This is also a precaution in rainy weather when the overboots cannot be found.

Cosmetic Gloves Are Necessary

Circuit Riders Meet Talk Eight of These People Are 700 Years Old

THE sort of men who preach the word of God for no other incentive than a hundred or so dollars a year, and who ride through the North Georgia mountains from one little church to another, a straw mattress for a bed and fat meat and soggy cornbread for food—that sort of men met last week at Marietta for the year's session of the Asbury Roundout.

It is an association of preachers and laymen where everyone chips in to buy a horse for any circuit rider, who is the ray-boned, ambling, heavy-headed nag that always falls to the lot of a circuit rider.

There is no other time when preachers meet that so much real humanity comes out of the meeting. If you could have seen the riders and the laymen who are the pioneers in the way of Gospel teaching, told their homely jokes, laughed till they seemed about to fly off, and then

ARE talking just war and that extinct species once known as "bluesy?"

I asked five people last week about their line of conversation.

A motorman on the Forrest avenue car who can out-argue anybody who rides that line scratched his head a minute.

"Well," he said, "we bought a new sideboard the other day at my house, and all we can talk now is how to sell everything else we got so as to get new things to match that sideboard. I'll have to push the thing down the steps or commit suicide."

A young lady who's a graduate of Columbia college, and is here to dose the students at a boarding school with the higher education, sighed.

"I'm talking about the way men here walk. It's the most awful thing I ever saw. They stuff their hands in their pockets and hump over their shoulders and limp along like a lot of downhearted cranes. I think I'll start a school of walking."

An overworked business man, who gets down at 8 and is here all day with such tremendous mental burdens as composing letters that begin: "Yours are the 22d received, and contents noted," coughed:

"There's a place," he reflected, "down near Thomsville where there's more birds than you ever saw, and I guess, when the year's turned into November, I'd rather talk about that kingdom come."

A doctor, whose pay checks come from the fashionable parts of Atlanta, got over his medical air for a minute and looked natural:

"I'm talking a little more household work for women. Half my patients have simple hysterics, and it's all because they've got nothing to do. They sit up at nights, thinking up new things to have."

A young blood, who does patrol duty every day from 5 till 6 in front of Nunnally's, considered:

"I just been talking about some of our patients. You didn't see any of their stuff at the art exhibit, maybe? They're got some real masterpieces in flesh tints than you ever run down in any gallery."

And, what are you talking?

They were talking about the riders and the laymen who are the pioneers in the way of Gospel teaching, told their homely jokes, laughed till they seemed about to fly off, and then dropped into prayer that seemed to reach to the very soul, you would have known what real jollification is and what simple religion means.

Some pretend the day of the circuit rider is done, but he was there in Marietta by the score. In rickety bugles, aridride saddles, that must have been saved over from before the war, they ride in, and the biggest part of the Methodist conference was when they met.

The serious business was collecting $100 for every man who'd lost a horse, and praying that the next year's work might prosper. When that was done Nath Thompson and John Walker and Marvin Williams started the fun, and there hasn't been such a meeting since the first Methodist church was built in Georgia—like the roundout last week at Marietta.

You don't know what a preacher is till you've been to a meeting of the circuit riders—like the roundout last week at Marietta.

There is no other time when preachers meet that so much real humanity comes out of the meeting. If you could have seen the riders and the laymen who are the pioneers in the way of Gospel teaching, told their homely jokes, laughed till they seemed about to fly off, and then dropped into prayer that seemed to reach to the very soul, you would have known what real jollification is and what simple religion means.

Some pretend the day of the circuit rider is done, but he was there in Marietta by the score. In rickety bugles, aridride saddles, that must have been saved over from before the war, they ride in, and the biggest part of the Methodist conference was when they met.

The serious business was collecting $100 for every man who'd lost a horse, and praying that the next year's work might prosper. Eight Octogenarians Who Attended Birthday party

First, they said a blessing, thanking God for long life and good digestion. Then an old black nigger, who's four-score himself, took off the cover of the first dish, and Mr. Thompson helped Mr. Stuart. He said then that every body who didn't take two helpings would be called the old man of the party, and not worthy of his raising. And he had the dishes passed all round the table, and they set to.

After a while they had the second helping, and then went to the next dish. Occasionally somebody said a word or two, but it was considered rather bad form. For this dinner was not simply to celebrate a birthday, but also to prove that all of the eight men, eighty years and more though they were, retained sound appetites and digestions.

It's generally agreed that such an dinner never was laid in south Georgia, and, what's more, fuller lunch never was done to birthday fare. Each octogenarian had two helpings from every dish, and finished in fine fettle.

It just went to show, said Mr. Thompson, as they stood up to drink a last toast, that all the "real men" were born eighty years ago. As for this generation—all the eight shook their heads regretfully.

After dinner the 700 years were grouped and photographed, and then they went automobiling.

THE gatekeepers at the Terminal station say the conversation they hear is the most original and amusing to be found in Atlanta.

About ten people get left every day, and then they tell them about it. One keeper was saying last week that you wouldn't ever guess what resourcefulness in language the average man has as he stands with a suitcase in one hand and a handbag in the other and watches the back end of his train as it glides away.

But out of the ten, three or four are people who are not going on a journey, but are there to tell their own good-byes. Out of this minority never more than one is married.

The gatekeeper said, after a married man doesn't dare to be late, or else he wants to be sure his wife's gone.

But with unaged men it's different. Every day or so one wanders over with a magazine for his beloved, gets himself a quiet corner and reads while the arrivals and departs. When he takes up he gives a sigh, "Ah, me," and reads another story.

The first thing a traveler who's missed his train wants to do is start a fight. He first tries to find the gatekeeper, but being used to this phase of human nature, they pour a little oil on the fire.

Then the traveler, who is a little bit of a fighter, and casts about among the crowd in the waiting room.

When everything else has failed, he tries a taxi to ride to Five o'clock, but to show how much he cares.

A woman always talks in low, rapid, rapid words to her husband. If she has one, or the nearest substitute, if she has one.

Really, the unattached man who is there to bid a fond farewell to his wife and children is the only one who doesn't seem to mind.

"Ah, me," he says, with the air of a philosopher. "Well, really, how unfortunate."

As she arranged the grille cake and cleared into the sausage that was being to serve itself, she told what the matter with Atlanta.

"When it comes time to eat, an Atlanta man has first got to think whether he'll go home or not; then, if he does, he can risk it up town, then he thinks what joint he'll try; then he thinks over whether it's hash or ribs."

She nodded toward Marietta street. "There's a lot of people standing out there and thinking over how we cook chickens for the last month."

"The autumn head gave itself a sneaking in the back door."

"You old boy, she says, just look at you all day, and me just ready to put supper on, you are a fine site."

So she rushed him over to the sink and she grabbed up a hunk of soap and a towel and in about 2 minutes and a half gory was hollering bloody murder, and in 2 minutes more he was ready for the party.

THE first thing after a prisoner from recorder's court reaches the Fulton county tower, he is placed on trial by his fellow-prisoners for "breaking into" jail. If he is found guilty, he is stuck with a fine in the shape of sweeping out the third floor, or contribution of a dime for the purchase of chewing tobacco.

This is the "kangaroo court" which the tower prisoners have established, with judge, jury, prosecuting attorney, lawyers for the defense, and bailiffs. Defendants are not lacking.

"These courts have been in vogue for many years. Their inauguration dates back to the famous Blind Tiger war which followed prohibition, when two rival gangs passed many hours of jail-dom by bar-room scenes enacted in the city courts."

Always, as prisoner after prisoner comes in, and it won't seem to mind the custom of "kangaroo courts" would become obsolete, there remained in the jail some one or two offenders who in the past night trail him by establishing a studios reputation with the secretaries.

He purchased a Bible, one of these monster calf-bound volumes as big as the Encyclopedia Britannica, and placed it in all its ponderosity in the middle of his table. Its function, he told his friends, was to be seen and not heard.

But continued presence had its effect. Two nights later friends came upon him ensconced in an easy chair deep in the Book of Isaiah. He refused to go out, and they were so astounded that they withdrew in awed silence.

They say that he has since taken to reading the Bible earnestly.

Isaiah

A HYPOCRITICAL conversation might be the title of this story. He was not given over wholly to the way of the transgressor, but he had been known to look upon the things of the flesh.

So when he secured a room at the new Y. M. C. A. his first thought was to contract whatever whispers of the past night trail him by establishing a studios reputation with the secretaries.

Atlanta Noses

THEY do say noses are better powdered in Atlanta than anywhere else in the world. We interviewed a fashionable photographer on last week, one of the city's chief devotees and purveyors.

Lips here, he said, are incomparable, eyes are irresistible; grace and charm are inimitable; but the complexion—

"You're taking a chance on that, he admitted, because nobody knows. Atlanta keeps the powder puff working so many extra hours you can't ever tell what's complexion and what isn't."

Have you ever noticed it?—the noses being powdered on the street, in the cars, in the stores? Is there a spot in Atlanta at any hour where you can't see a fluffy puff busy?

Edson Browne, of Atlanta, has seen so much of the powdering, he has put it into song, and the song has made a hit in New York.

Here are two of the verses:

She Stopped to Powder Her Nose

Miss Lucy Jones, a winsome maid of one and twenty seasons, Became an ardent suffragette, though no one knew her reasons.

When election day came round this maiden much perplexed, Was waiting when the teller cried "Miss Lucy Jones is next."

She walked up to the voting booth, but said "I'll relate."

She pulled a mirror from her bag, and made the others wait, while she Stopped to powder her nose, she stopped to powder her nose, He hesitated not their go, the mob cried out, "Go on and vote."

But Lucy only said, while blushing like a rose, "But we should worry about the time."

So every woman in the line, Just stopped to powder her nose.

In the finest hotel in the land upon the eighteenth story, Miss Lucy had a suite of rooms and there she retired in glory.

About the hour of ten one night, while ready to retire, She suddenly was startled by someone who hollered "Fire!"

She heard the fire bells ringing loud, but like the will of fate, A fireman came to save her life, but Lucy made him wait. While she Stopped to powder her nose, she stopped to powder her nose, The fireman's lungs were filled with smoke, he said, "This is no time to joke."

But Lucy only said, as she gathered up her clothes, "To get to powder her nose, I've got to beautify my face."

Then every woman in the place, Just stopped to powder her nose.

Our Best Citizens Are Becoming Jugglers

MAJOR E. E. POMEROY balanced a plate of soup from the counter to a chair which had a wide arm on which one arranges one's lay-out of provender and tries to imagine that one is sitting at one's own table and waiting for a four-course dinner to be served.

Walter Andrews, at the same time, was conveying a piece of custard pie and something for a napkin.

In perspective down the avenues of combined split-bottomed chairs and pine-topped tables, was a back that suggested Robert F. Maddox; and, whoever it was, his thoughts were engaged on a sandwich in one hand, a class of dairy product in the other and a chocolate éclair between them.

Any day in the week, now, you can see our most prominent citizens tugging their food. Since the caterers sprang up one's club is no longer the place for one's luncheon as once it was. Now, we stand in line till a pirate on the other side of the counter looks our way and says:

"Well, what is it?"

Some Approximate Jokes

"I am not afraid of the dark," said a French chauffeur who had slackened up at an inn regarding the merits of the horse and motor car.

"No, of course not, dear," said a French chauffeur who had slackened up at an inn regarding the merits of the horse and motor car.

"I was a little afraid once, when I went into the pantry to get a tart."

"What were you afraid of?" said a French chauffeur who had slackened up at an inn regarding the merits of the horse and motor car.

"I was afraid I would not find the tart."

"Are you going to the Wallerby reception tonight?" said a French chauffeur who had slackened up at an inn regarding the merits of the horse and motor car.

"No; the Twobles will be there, so I declined my invitation."

"Why do you object to the presence of the Twobles?" said a French chauffeur who had slackened up at an inn regarding the merits of the horse and motor car.

"I don't object to their presence particularly, but I have already heard them tell the story of their escape from Berlin ten or twelve times, and I don't feel equal to an other recital."

"I suppose you had the usual trouble in Europe last summer," said Mrs. De Jinks.

"Yes," said Mrs. Von Stammerton, "chiefly in the matter of getting money, however. Why, would you believe it, Mrs. De Jinks, a letter of credit over there wasn't of any more value than a treaty of neutrality?"

Judge.

One afternoon a party named Bowers had business at a state penitentiary in the west, and on returning he spoke of the visit to a number of friends.

"The prisoners down there," said Bowers, "were having some kind of Saturday afternoon holiday, with a brass band and speeches to match. And say, maybe the leader of that band wasn't some wonder in the choice of appropriate music! What do you suppose he was playing?"

"Search me," responded one of the friends. "Some say hymn, I suppose."

"He was not!" declared Bowers, emphatically. "He was playing 'This Is the Life.'"

General Pan told of a French non-commissioned officer who was being examined on the subject of tactics.

"Give me an instance of strategy," was the question.

The soldier thought hard, then replied:

"When in battle you run out of ammunition and don't want the enemy to know it, it is good strategy to keep on firing."

"Who is that lady dressed in black, mother?" asked Bobby, as he sat with his mother on a trolley.

"That is a Sister of Charity, my boy," replied his mother.

Bobby pondered deeply for a moment, and then he said, "Which is she, mother, Faith or Hope?"

"HIER, STUFF" BY TECH FOOTBALL STARS

By Ward Greene

WHEN HART rammed the line for Princeton not so many years ago, he buckled on a steel harness that clamped close on his shoulders and riveted his neck and head as stiff as a steel projectile.

This was because Hart's neck was broken.

The story of how Hart risked death each minute by playing with a broken neck day after day, has been told time and again; yet never equally as flashy, grit as sturdy, is displayed by Tech men out at Grant field with no pesos on.

One of these unyielding heroes of the gridiron is Tyler Montague, captain of next year's football team and one of the pluckiest men that ever set a cleated shoe on a Tech field.

He weighs hardly 140 pounds, but his stiff arm, his crafty dodging, bullet tackling, undaunted spirit, and, above all, the native cunning that permeates all his playing, makes him a formidable man for any team to face.

On the first Saturday in October, he played against South Carolina. He helped Tech win, but the next day in the afternoon, he was stricken with appendicitis. An immediate operation was necessary.

They all said that Montague was out for the season. Tech carts were plunged in mourning; the doctors scouted any whinger that he might yet get in the game; out at the flats Heilmann revised his team-building to eliminate him.

But they had counted too much on the doctors, too little on Montague. A little thing like an operation was nothing to him. By sheer grit he got well.

Before November he was practicing with the squad, by the first week in November he was doing scrimmage work, when Auburn came to town, he pleaded so hard with the doctors that they said he could play.

Hugh Mauck's Pluck

It would be nice to tell how Montague snatched victory from defeat by a 20-yard sprint in the last quarter.

It would be a fitting climax to the story, if it was only true. But it isn't. Yet, through no fault of his or any member of the team. All that human flesh could do, they did, and Montague, newsmen from the sick bed, was foremost in the pitch of the battle and seemed to be no worse for it afterward.

And perhaps there will be a fitting climax to the story on Thanksgiving day.

Then, there was Hugh Mauck, another Atlanta boy. In the first game of the season, his first game in several years, Mauck fell about of a nasty scrimmage and ligaments in his knee were wrenched and torn. He had to be supported from the field.

According to the doctors, Mauck was laid out for two weeks, and for one week, it is true, he did not scrimmage.

Then came the Alabama battle. Mauck went to Birmingham with the others. About the second quarter, the thin siffon line was marching slowly but surely down the field. Buck on buck forced the Jackets backward, and it was through left tackle, Mauck's tackle, that the scarlet backs ripped their gains.

Mauck, crouched on the sidelines, his battered knee clinched with steel braces and clinking tape, each step one of pain, begged to be put in. Against his better judgment, Heilmann, itching to stop that heart-breaking advance through the left side of the line, consented.

Mauck took the tackle at the beginning of the quarter. The first play, fumbled against him, but he was ready, flung himself head and heels into the opposing tackle and damped the hammering half-back for a two-yard loss.

though Tech came out of the fray a loser, Mauck had done a hero's work in helping to hold their opponents to a margin score.

This is the sort of stuff that wins football games, teeth-gripped fortitude, which often claws a game out of the coils in the last few minutes of play.

Pickering, the famous Minnesota back, was built of that breed, when he rose from a sick-bed to battle the Wolverines. Such was Sam Costen, the Commodore quarterback whose sensational tackling in the Vanderbilt-Carlisle game of 1906, was the wonder of all who knew that Sam's knees were tottering under an iron brace and that every movement was exquisite agony.

Such stuff was bred in Norcross, the Michigan quarter whose "loose trolley" has become famous in gridiron annals. There were some delicate tendons in his ankle which now and again would slip out of place. All he had to do was to have the doctor push them back again. There was no pain suffered. But the disastrous thing was that each time the tendons slipped, his knee would give way. He would simply fall down. He couldn't advance a step.

They tell today how Norcross would get away with the ball for an end run, and suddenly keel over in his tracks. "Norcross' trolley's off!" chanted the students in the stands, and out would patter a doctor to slip the tendons back, when the game would be resumed.

Fielder's Great Run

Playing with broken bones, is one form of football courage; of another quality is that which keeps the player up to the highest pitch where he can achieve a play that under normal conditions would be impossible.

Two incidents of this kind have been noted by the scribes at Grant field this year. One was Fielder's work in the Sewanee game, another, Senter's great line plunging against Auburn.

The Sewanee game had been a pretty thing until Fielder's run. Both teams were on their mettle, each without any material advantage. Then the Jacket captain pulled down a Tiger punt on his own 20-yard line.

There was nothing tricky or crafty about what followed. Just a straight-away dash down the field to the goal. Fielder's path lay within ten feet of the side-lines all the way. The whole Sewanee team was after him. At any moment a tackler might have hurled through the air and downed him, or at least, forced him out of bounds.

The queer part of it all was that they didn't. Hands leaped toward him, many Tigers struggled in the rear, thinking surely some one else would get the man. But without altering his stride once, without swerving a hair's breadth from his course, the Tech captain romped eighty yards to the touchdown.

It was Tech's first score, and it broke the heart of the Tigers. It was too impossible for them to grasp, a genuine hero stunt that by all laws of ordinary play is impossible. But it's just this thing of rising above the ordinary that wins football games.

Jim Senter's work in the Auburn battle was of the same texture. For two years the Platemans have been ravaging the south, the bulk of their whole success the line, built of men that withstood the shock of any stat that came against them. Amie Sikes, of Vanderbilt, couldn't penetrate that line; Bob McWhorter had to go around it; the best Tech had last season crumpled against it like paper.

Then, two weeks ago, a youth weighing 175 pounds with a frame as beautiful as Greek sculpture, bored through Auburn's line as no one has been able to do in two seasons.

If Jim Senter had been able to carry the ball every time it was in Tech's possession, there might have been a different story. Time after time he pierced the outer bulwarks of the Blue for substantial gains, and with each plunge Auburn's heart trembled a trifle more and Senter's "confidence" grew. If Senter's flesh had been as willing as his spirit, he could have bucked Tech to victory. As it was, he set a record that will stand as long as the championship Auburn team is remembered, the only man who broke Donahue's Stone Wall.

It is to be regretted that Atlanta is not afforded the privilege of hearing some of our great artists in concerts who are touring the country merely on account of lack of interest by the public.

I hope that the day is not far off when a permanent symphony orchestra will be established in Atlanta. This is what Atlanta needs, and ought to have. Why won't some of our wealthy men furnish the funds for such an undertaking? The Boston symphony orchestra is supported by one man, Colonel Higginson. Why won't some man in Atlanta make an orchestra his hobby?

though Tech came out of the fray a loser, Mauck had done a hero's work in helping to hold their opponents to a margin score.

This is the sort of stuff that wins football games, teeth-gripped fortitude, which often claws a game out of the coils in the last few minutes of play.

Pickering, the famous Minnesota back, was built of that breed, when he rose from a sick-bed to battle the Wolverines. Such was Sam Costen, the Commodore quarterback whose sensational tackling in the Vanderbilt-Carlisle game of 1906, was the wonder of all who knew that Sam's knees were tottering under an iron brace and that every movement was exquisite agony.

Such stuff was bred in Norcross, the Michigan quarter whose "loose trolley" has become famous in gridiron annals. There were some delicate tendons in his ankle which now and again would slip out of place. All he had to do was to have the doctor push them back again. There was no pain suffered. But the disastrous thing was that each time the tendons slipped, his knee would give way. He would simply fall down. He couldn't advance a step.

They tell today how Norcross would get away with the ball for an end run, and suddenly keel over in his tracks. "Norcross' trolley's off!" chanted the students in the stands, and out would patter a doctor to slip the tendons back, when the game would be resumed.

Fielder's Great Run

Playing with broken bones, is one form of football courage; of another quality is that which keeps the player up to the highest pitch where he can achieve a play that under normal conditions would be impossible.

Two incidents of this kind have been noted by the scribes at Grant field this year. One was Fielder's work in the Sewanee game, another, Senter's great line plunging against Auburn.

The Sewanee game had been a pretty thing until Fielder's run. Both teams were on their mettle, each without any material advantage. Then the Jacket captain pulled down a Tiger punt on his own 20-yard line.

There was nothing tricky or crafty about what followed. Just a straight-away dash down the field to the goal. Fielder's path lay within ten feet of the side-lines all the way. The whole Sewanee team was after him. At any moment a tackler might have hurled through the air and downed him, or at least, forced him out of bounds.

The queer part of it all was that they didn't. Hands leaped toward him, many Tigers struggled in the rear, thinking surely some one else would get the man. But without altering his stride once, without swerving a hair's breadth from his course, the Tech captain romped eighty yards to the touchdown.

It was Tech's first score, and it broke the heart of the Tigers. It was too impossible for them to grasp, a genuine hero stunt that by all laws of ordinary play is impossible. But it's just this thing of rising above the ordinary that wins football games.

Jim Senter's work in the Auburn battle was of the same texture. For two years the Platemans have been ravaging the south, the bulk of their whole success the line, built of men that withstood the shock of any stat that came against them. Amie Sikes, of Vanderbilt, couldn't penetrate that line; Bob McWhorter had to go around it; the best Tech had last season crumpled against it like paper.

Then, two weeks ago, a youth weighing 175 pounds with a frame as beautiful as Greek sculpture, bored through Auburn's line as no one has been able to do in two seasons.

If Jim Senter had been able to carry the ball every time it was in Tech's possession, there might have been a different story. Time after time he pierced the outer bulwarks of the Blue for substantial gains, and with each plunge Auburn's heart trembled a trifle more and Senter's "confidence" grew. If Senter's flesh had been as willing as his spirit, he could have bucked Tech to victory. As it was, he set a record that will stand as long as the championship Auburn team is remembered, the only man who broke Donahue's Stone Wall.

Atlanta Should Have a Permanent Symphony Orchestra

WHAT does Atlanta like in music?

What do we need?

What have we accomplished?

In a brief comment written for The Journal, Mr. Kraft, city organist, answers some of these questions.

Most significant is his suggestion that we should have a permanent symphony orchestra.

"Don't some rich Atlantian," he pleads, "make such an orchestra his hobby?"

By Edwin Arthur Kraft

City Organist.

Organ recitals here as a rule have been well attended and since my coming to Atlanta I have seen a great improvement in the conduct of the people. It seems to be a universal habit for people when they hear the organ played to walk around. This was unquestionably started by the churches when the organist was compelled to play a prelude for the benefit of late arrivals and also to play them out.

I am thankful to say that a strict rule has been maintained of allowing no one to enter during the playing of a selection. There seems to be still some unnecessary talking, but it is on the road to improvement.

An offering has been taken up at all recitals to help defray expenses and to give the people an opportunity of seeing their appreciation by contributing to the worthy cause of music.

It would surprise many to know that numerous incidents have occurred when the collections have averaged half cent per person.

I have followed a practice of playing one request number at every Sunday recital and from the requests that I have received I find that the general public are fond of melodies that are easily understood rather than some of the contrapuntal writings of some of our modern writers, for which I am thankful.

An interesting work which the festival association has done is its help and support of the festival chorus. This chorus was started some four years ago and when I came to take charge of the work I found some 250 members, many of whom had voices like rusty hinges and could not see the difference between do, re, mi, I changed the policy by having an examination for membership so as to eliminate the voices that were harmful. So far I have only been able to interest some hundred voices who have passed the slight trial. It is beyond my comprehension why it is that we can not secure a membership of 400 or 500 voices in a city the size of Atlanta.

What a splendid advertisement this would be for Atlanta in a musical way, in fact, for the entire south.

I fail to understand why persons who have voices have not availed themselves of this opportunity, which is afforded them free of charge—all that is asked is regularity at rehearsals which occur in Cable hall every Monday evening at 7:30.

A most discouraging incident occurred which shows the lack of loyalty among chorus singers when on the first Sunday of November the chorus was expected to sing and every member having been specially notified to my great astonishment I found some forty singers out of some one hundred members ready to take part at the auditorium recital. To my great surprise I learned that the circus had arrived in town and was preparing to give a performance the following afternoon. To think that music should have to compete with a circus and lose out in attendance.

How to Learn the Glides and Dips of the Lulu Fado

CAN you dance the Lulu Fado? If you can, you are not only up to the procession, but ahead of the band, for the Lulu Fado has just arrived!

If you can't, here's your chance to learn to whirl and glide and dip, and tap your toes and snap your fingers in this fantastic and picturesque new Spanish dance.

The new dance is practically unknown in America, but it leads off the list of society dances that Miss Edna Nell, formerly with Pavlova's

Imperial Russian ballet brought over from Paris this fall. Miss Nell is introducing the modernized fandango to American dancers. Her very first class will be made up of Journal readers, for the sponsor of the Lulu Fado has written the following "lessons" which she declares will enable any one to acquire the steps of the brand new dance.

Probably no one knows the Lulu Fado quite so well as Miss Nell, for from the first it has been her favorite.

Here it is! Start the music! Twist your toes in the mazes of the latest dance, the Lulu Fado.

By Edna Nell
Formerly With Pavlova in Imperial Russian Ballet.

The first step in the Lulu Fado is two slow walking steps and four fast walking steps. The lady going backward and gentlemen forward in a regular one-step position. This is changed four times. The count is 1, 2, 1, 2, 3, 4, 1, 2, 1, 2, 3, 4.

Second step—Lady polkas backward—the gentleman forward, keeping the same position with the arms as in first step.

Third step—This is the characteristic step of the Lulu Fado which shows its Spanish origin. The couple separate, the gentleman making a circle to the right—the lady a circle to the left. They continue the same step as in the first step only they are each going around a circle away from each other. Now step 1, 2, 1, 2, 3, 4—clapping the fingers on 1 and 1 and clapping the hands on 1 when the lady and gentleman complete the circle and meet. Continue this twice then come together face to face, gentleman steps forward with left—lady back with right foot and continue the first step.

Fourth step—The turn is now made which may be called the pivot turn and is unlike any other turn used in the other dances.

The right foot is used as a pivot, the left foot moving or used to make the turn. The left foot touching the floor turn on a complete turn. The pivot is done two or three turns with a great deal of swing.

Now begin with the first step again and repeat the whole series.

If there are several couples dancing together the lady may change partners on the third step. That is instead of returning to her original partner at the end of the circle she may go forward to the next man, and repeat the whole series.

Two Instances of Pure Nerve Have Played Their Part This Year in Tech's Football Battles

This is the way the Lulu Fado is danced in the rural districts of Spain.
